

Home Amendments

Writing and ratifying the first ten amendments was no easy feat for James Madison and his fellow delegates. After all, they were responsible for determining which rights and freedoms Americans would enjoy from their government, not just in the 1700s, but today! Your objective is to write amendments for your home. It's your job to write TEN amendments that will give you the types of rights and freedoms you expect to enjoy at home and protect yourself from having your rights infringed upon by parents. Here are some examples:

- Children have the right to express their opinions, provided they do so in a respectful & appropriate manner.
- Children have the right to 2 hours of screen time, provided it is content approved by parents.
